The Testament

Book Three

The dawn the old ones fell to pray

The sun rose bright the valley day

And from the ashes scattered wide

The seeds of hope were born inside

The path was cold the night was deep

And many wept who could not sleep

But I held fast to what I knew

And carried on the light for you

The river bent the mountain stood

The forest gave its timber good

We built a home we built a life

And called the land our own by right

Then came the fire the smoke the cry

The sky turned red the earth asked why

The old ones gone the young ones lost

The cost of peace was more than most
